

Reflection

Weekly Report 1/21/19 - 1/27/19

This week largely focused on the growth that has been made throughout Independent Study and Mentorship. During the school year many goals were set and achieved as mentioned in the assessment over self- reflection. However, it was understanding those achievements and how they aided in the overall growth throughout Independent Study and Mentorship that will set the second set of goals for the next semester.

During the beginning of the assessment, it mainly looked upon the goal to overall become less shy. While this goal was achieved and made major strides in not only Independent Study and Mentorship, but also in life away from school. By achieving a goal which has been set for close to twelve years, it has shown that no challenge is too big. From this point the next step is to physically put myself forward and to create a name, to be more outgoing and initiate the first hello.

While completing all the goals which were set for the last semester and reflecting on them. The realization to not only build off of the foundation that achieving those goals created, but to also create new goals which branched off into new territory was realized. These goals will need creativity as hopefully they will inspire the final product and guide the second semester.
