

Cold Calls Week Two

Weekly Report 9/30/18 - 9/8/18

This week was similar to the last as it involved contacting professionals through cold calling. Unlike the last, this week included business symposium which gave the opportunity to interact with professionals face to face. Through the usage of This week was similar to the last as it involved contacting professionals through cold calling. Unlike the last, this week included business symposium which gave the opportunity to interact with professionals face to face. Through the usage of symposium, soft skills such as eye contact, hand shakes, and overall speaking were able to be improved tremendously which will help once conducting interviews. Other aspects of professionalism which were obtained throughout symposium was networking, while there were few numbers of students studying veterinary medicine there was one which was introduced. Trinity was able to supply various contacts which she believed would help in finding veterinary orthopedic surgeon. The most valuable contact provided was Blackstone Veterinary Hospital which she said that an emergency orthopedic was on call. During class the call was made, similarly to the first cold call I was placed on hold for a few minutes. However this cold call was slightly different from the last as the call was dropped. A call back was in place which went straight to voicemail, this allowed for practice how to leave a professional voicemail.