

Discovering Databases

Weekly Report 8/20/18 - 8/24/18

This week during ISM I discovered how to properly use advanced searches in the databases. This will allow me to produce more insightful and reliable Research Assessments. By using databases, I will be able to become more familiar with veterinary medical terminology which will allow me to become more professional with how I hold myself when speaking to other due to the confidence that the knowledge will produce in me. The new terminology is going to separate me from others studying in the same field as me by by setting myself at a higher standard because of my greater insight of Veterinary Science.

Another portion of my week was dedicated to preparing my introduction speech. During this preparation I discovered that my original draft/outline was terrible because of that, I realized that yes speeches do need preparation, however they shouldn't be forced or sound mechanical. The only portion of my speech that was truly "prepared" for was my introduction, I believe that not using my outline was the reason as to why my speech was successful as I was telling what I felt and what I wanted others to know about me. This first week of ISM became my foundation for the rest of the year through my discoveries of the databases and presentations.
